THE ORDIT CODE OF PRACTICE

Those on the Register must: -

- a. Clearly inform all prospective customers in writing of the services provided, with particular reference to trainers' qualifications, costs, venue, duration and content in relation to the ADI examination structure. Make adequate provisions to acquaint clients with the establishment's terms of business and have a complaints procedure.
- b. Take all reasonable care, skill and diligence in training clients in all relevant aspects of traffic and driver education, taking account of individual training needs and ensuring the safety of students.
- c. Not discuss information disclosed by a client during training with any other party, except where under obligation in law. Not discuss the client's progress or driving or instructional standard with any other party, except for normal consultation within the establishment. Where the lessons are being paid for by another person or company, the third party shall have the right to this information, providing this is given with the client's knowledge.
- d. Ensure all vehicles used in training are maintained in a safe and satisfactory condition, and are properly insured, taxed and where appropriate certified as roadworthy.
- e. Apply an honest, moral and professional approach in all business practice and avoid improper language, suggestion or physical contact with the clients whilst maintaining proper standards of personal hygiene and dress.
- f. Ensure that professional ADI training complies with the current legislation particularly in respect of business premises and practice, staff, vehicles and public liability. Abide by ORDIT's Advertising Code and other requirements for the provision of a professional service.
